General:

I hope you will not feel I am intruding, for I address you on a matter of considerable interest to me.

I am writing a family history and have traced our ancestry to a point where it is barely possible it connects with yours, and, if so, you may be able to give me information which I should value highly.

My parents were accidentally drowned together a few days after I reached my sixth year (I am now thirty) and my memory of them is very limited. My Howard grandparents are dead and also eight of their ten children. Having often been asked questions concerning my people that I was unable to answer I determined two years ago to collect all the information I could from those yet living and place it in the form of a history. I have had better success than I expected; but I want to feel sure I have gotten all there is to get and that is my excuse for troubling you. If it is as I think it may be I shall feel both pleased and honored and if it is not I trust there is no harm done.

I had written my reasons for thinking your family and ours sprang from a common ancestor but it made too long a letter. Others who might know something of it have failed to answer, so I apply to you for the coveted information.

Will you please tell me if the given name of your Grandfather Howard was John Eager, if he had a brother William and parents named John and Rachel, natives of Maryland and of English descent?

I would be much pleased to hear from you on the subject and will gladly answer any questions you might see fit to ask.

Very respectfully,

My dear General

I just returned from Chicago. I had a very pleasant visit with your brother Gen C. H. Howard. He went over with me the points I wished to obtain on Gettysburg & I was greatly interested. He is to prepare memoranda for me which I feel sure will be of great vol. me. He also put me in track of other information which I desire.

I was much pained to hear through him of grandmothers severe illness. He said that she was very bad, but had been a little more comfortable the past few days. The dear good soul, how my heart has always been drawn out towards her -

I have always carried about with me the memory of her sweet face, that always looked beautiful to me. Her Christian life was pure gold. How justly proud her sons can be of such a mother. You know that she will be there to greet you when you are called to the heavenly home.

My extensions come all right.
Many thanks for your kindness.
I shall leave here the 15th inst, &
probably reach home by Dec 1st making only 15 days of the extension.

Give my kindest regards to all the family.

Sincerely yours,
Winfield Scott

Gen O. O. Howard.

Dear Sir,

As you are prominent in the work of the "Young men's Christian Association", I venture to write to you for information as to the present limitations, as to membership in that Association?

A few years ago, I remember, it was limited, so that Unitarians were not permitted to join it, not being what was considered Orthodox in religious belief. Having lived for many years in localities where no Associations existed I am not informed, as to whether the same limitation still exists, or whether a larger liberality prevails.

I would also like to learn whether young men of virtuous character, and pure lives, yet subscribers to no Christian creed, are admitted to membership.

From what I know of the practical work of the Association, I am prepared to appreciate it;

But as the "Evangelical churches" of this state embrace but five percent of the population, I am thinking whether similar work may not benefit the immense majority who do not take the Christian name? And in case the "Christian Associations" are too limited to admit those who do not take the the name, whether it might not do good to organize Associations that will do a good work practically, though not technically "Christian"?

By giving me the information desired you will confer a favor on

Yours very appreciatively
J. W. North

P.S. I was once introduced to you, by General Eaton, at Washington, as Judge North. Of course I do not expect that you could remember me.
J. W. N.

as I see it every thing was working toward the universality of the canteen, and it still is, for Congress will at once be invoked to legislate it into a legal existence. The wisest, most thoroughly enlightened Christian consciences of the Army should unite on a policy with respect to the canteen and lead in ejecting it from the Army, or in adopting it with all possible checks as the most practical solution of the drink habit. I often earnestly wish there might be a convention of the Christian people of the Army to deliberate upon such questions and mark out the wisest course, as an aggressive and defensive policy relating to all moral questions affecting the Army.

I beg of you to entrust me with your confidence and opinions on these various aspects of the Chaplain's scope of work and indicate such policy as you think should guide all the religious forces in the Army. Such suggestions as you confide I will carefully utilize as you direct, either in the paper or as private views.

Kindly pardon so long a letter.

I am very Respectfully
Your Obedient Servant,

Dear Sir;

Permit me to request a copy of your order prohibiting gambling in the Division of the Pacific for publication in the Army Sword and Shield. I rejoice in the courage that beards hoary customs that degrade men, but which for their long possession are too often defended. This advancement of the line will no doubt encounter severe criticism and opposition, but your action is in accord with the action of all the States of the Union except one, or perhaps two in the South, and will receive the endorsement of legislators, jurists, clergy, and above all the Christian heart of this land. Your order will thrust upon the attention of the public the importance of more general prohibition of this pernicious practice.

There is a matter of great importance relating to the moral condition of the officers of the Army about which I have for some time thought of soliciting suggestions from yourself, one which I want to treat in the Sword & Shield. It is the officer's club rooms. I regard the officer's club rooms as the most formidable seat of Satan in the Army. I mean those where drink is provided and gambling practiced. They menace the morality of all the young men entering the Army. Here they meet their superiors and must accept or reject the mistaken hospitality of their seniors who invite them to drink. The strain is too great for a large majority. Worldliness is so aggressive. It hesitates at nothing. This spirit rules in the officer's club room. It is a place slippery for the feet of the unstable and full of danger for the unwary.

I hold that a room set apart by orders, public property, should be guarded against being usurped by the drinkers of a post and made unfit for the moral and religious. Bacchus has no more right to take possession than the Chaplain has to usurp it for all-day prayermeetings. The club room as the social rendezvous of a post should be free from every thing that would be offensive to any.

I have said nothing in the Sword & Shield about this matter, for I appreciate how sensitive a subject it is, and with what prudence any steps should be taken looking toward changing their character. I wanted to obtain your views, knowing that you must have deplored their character these many years. But, General, the time is at hand, on account of the mighty Temperance revolution now working, when you will not leave to deplore and tolerate such things longer. As a Chaplain in the Army, I feel that this is within my province, and that therefore it is not presumption on my part to communicate with you, privately, on this subject. I do not believe in legal reformation, but I do believe in requiring obstreperous drinkers and gamblers to keep their practices out of public places.

In the Nov. number of the Sword & Shield I have ventured three articles on moral lines, where I am sure I do not stand alone. One on Saloons outside military reservations, and how to mitigate their evil influence. One on post traders, under the head of Amusement Rooms Again, and the third on Sunday Observance.

I am anxious, not for my own sake, but for the cause's sake, to have these propositions widely endorsed, and endorsed by those who are in high places. I have carefully canvassed these subjects and am sure I am not amiss on them as phases, of the moral condition of the Army, of very great importance.

The check given to the lantern by the Secretary of War affords relief from a corrupting institution. As a choice between evils I elect the lantern except for the scandal to the Army of a traffic in intoxicating liquors with the enlisted men, supervised, managed and conducted by officers, and on account of the corrupting bribe that its profits constitute. Like high license it blinds the eyes, and I have not been able to see any mitigation of the drink curse when its profits were turned to company funds. And so far

Gen Howard,

My Dear Sir,

I presume to write you a note this morning to get advice in regard to a young son of mine, who has foolishly enlisted in the Marine Service and is now at Mare Island.

He is only 19 and has been overpersuaded by some one, I am unable to say whom to enlist against my desire and advice.

He writes me a very penitent letter and is very anxious to escape from the life of idle soldier and he trusts

and settle down to something more compatible with his inclinations. Any help either by personal influence or advice will be most gratefully accepted.

If I knew your address
in the City, I would be glad to have a personal interview with you - and with your permission will call at a time convenient to you.

I know ^{you} only from reputation, yet feel as if I appeal to a friend.

Yours most sincerely
Mrs. J. D. Rodgers.
