Dear Gen. Howard:-

Your favor of the 17 inst has been forwarded. I am glad you make the inquiry. It is a long story which I will make short.

The article in the U.S. Investor wholly misrepresents the site and surroundings of Grand Dalles; but tells less than the truth of Mr. Taylor. We are all sadly and toally disappointed in him.

Briefly as I can tell you this is the case: we had confidence that he was in the enterprise in entire good faith and was an able man and so put him in Manager with power. As time went on his projects did not come to pass as promised and he w'd explain the delay. Finally we insisted on a report of the business--that he give account of his stewardship. After much delay we were favored with a sort of lump statement made last Dec. Upon this we tried to get a detailed report which was promised but never came. Then as a last resort we went to work among investors as far as we c'd reach them, with the result that fraud characterizes his transactions everywhere from the beginning.

This is the whole story in brief. Times without number we have found his word worthless and that the Co.'s money has been used apparently without stint and not accounted for and the whole business in chaos.

We are now "moving on his works." Two large investors have just gone west to see Mr. Taylor and have him right the wrong so far he can and get out of our way. These men are due there today if not yesterday. If Mr. Taylor does not at once come to time they will straightway apply for the appointment of a receiver as the quickest way to end his ruinous power so that we can be free to go on and keep faith with all parties concerned. The Co. is made up of honest men and owns as good property as is to be found between the two oceans. We do not proposed to be tricked out of it.

I w'd be glad to answer any specific point in your mind not covered by the above. With this mail I send some recent printed matter and a late paper giving account of the work on the Locks.

Sincerely and affectionately yours,

To

GRAND DALLES IN BAD REPUTE.

A New Spring Suit*for O. D. Taylor-The Columbia River Fruit Co. and Other Schemes of the Baptist Preacher Seriously Involved.

[Special Correspondence U. S. Investor.]

PORTLAND, ORE., April 18, 1893.

For some time past, a Rev. O. D. Taylor, formerly of Buffalo, N. Y., has been attempting to float in Cleveland, O., in Buffalo, in Michigan, in this city, and at other eastern points, a large town lot and fruit-growing scheme located in the vicinity of The Dalles, Ore., on the Columbia river. His operations have been transacted under several heads, such as the Interstate Investment Co., Columbia River Fruit Co., Interstate Improvement Co., etc. The former company was the original company, the president of which was O. D. Taylor.

This gentleman came to the Pacific northwest from Buffalo, N. Y., almost without means, some 12 or 13 years ago, and commenced business by conducting a real estate and insurance business at The Dalles, acting also in the capacity of pastor of the Baptist church at that point. By shrewd scheming, he became quite successful, accumulating considerable property, and claimed, in October, 1890, to be worth $323,000 over $12,000 liabilities. As his principal assets, however, consisted of real estate, proper deduction should be made from these figures. At this date, he was considered over-sharp in his dealings, and was reputed to be actually worth possibly $100,000.

The property at The Dalles, to which he directed his particular attention, was a town site known as "Grand Dalles," lying across the Columbia above The Dalles, and in the state of Washington. This town site and the lands adjoining, acquired by O. D. Taylor, comprised, as near as I can learn, about 2,000 acres, much of which was, and still is, almost absolutely worthless, consisting largely of sand dunes, over which is scattered large basalt rocks and stones. Fronting the river, the cliffs, or hills, on "The Grand Dalles" side rise to a height of some 300 feet. The soil possesses very little fertility, and the roughness of the location makes it totally unfit for a town site. This property was laid off into "town lots," a handsome painting of it was executed to suit the occasion and the taste of Taylor, and, armed with this, and accompanied, at times, by Messrs. Skeeles and Ellis, he journeyed through the East in search of purchasers.

THE SCHEME WAS THIS:

To engage a church in some quiet, Baptist community, display the painting accompanied by a lecture on the matchless resources of the northwest, and preach on the Sabbath. The town site was first called "North Dalles," I believe, but was very soon changed to "Grand Dalles." The trio told of the matchless beauty of the location, of "houses, grain, dairy and fruit farms, all coming into view as the gentle undulations are passed or circled;" of "Mt. Hood, 45 miles distant, always in sight, for nothing intervenes from any point of prospect, and the days are few when the sun is not shining here, both winter and summer. It is decidedly the grandest view to be had of this peerless peak around whose summit gathers all that expands the spirit." Thus, in the belief that "Grand Dalles is the imperial gateway of this imperial region," many invested. These lots were sold at various prices, but many of them as high as $300. I am unable to learn the exact number disposed of, but several of these deluded lot purchasers are now making Mr. Taylor trouble, and to a few of the most prominent and influential, who were his victims in Oregon, he has concluded it best to refund the money. As an instance, I cite the case of E. W. Harris, a merchant at Forest Grove, Ore. From all I can learn, Taylor has never ventured to bring suit to force payments on his property sold, at least not here in Portland.

A considerable portion of this town site of "North Dalles" or "Grand Dalles," or the land adjoining the town site proper, was, I am informed, school land for which Taylor paid but $2.50, or thereabouts, per acre, but to which he had not a clear title. It is stated on good authority that the actual cost to him of the entire tract was not to exceed $10,000. This he sold to the Interstate Investment Company for $150,000, representing the title as perfectly clear, and giving a warranty deed to that effect.

THE SHOE FACTORY.

As an initial step toward the building of industrial enterprises, the Interstate Improvement Company (which was in reality O. D. Taylor) contracted with a company known as the Boston Shoe & Leather Company, to build a factory for the manufacture of shoes, to cost $25,000. The contract stipulated that the latter company should receive, as payment for its building, $20,000 in cash and $5,000 in land. Of the former amount, $10,000 in cash, I am informed, was advanced from time to time, but when the building was finally completed, Taylor refused to pay the $10,000 still due, claiming that the company had not complied with their contract. Suit has now been brought against the Interstate Investment Company by the Boston Shoe & Leather Company, to force the payment of the $10,000. Machinery has been purchased and placed in position but the plant was never run, except for a very few days. Now there are in addition some 20 or more suits pending against the Interstate Investment Company, brought by the machinery manufacturers, the company having contracted to become liable for the debts of the Boston Shoe & Leather Company. The Interstate Investment Company is said to be good for all the claims against it, as it has a paid-up capital stock of $50,000, besides there is a double liability against the stock holders. These claims will all be heard in the courts in this city soon.

When the Interstate Investment Company became involved in litigation, the Interstate Improvement Company was organized, but as near as I can learn, its $500,000 of capital is "authorized" capital only. In addition to the shoe factory, there was erected on the town site a 20 by 30 foot building intended for a corset factory, but which was never operated. These two buildings are the only ones of any importance on the property at "Grand Dalles."

THE COLUMBIA RIVER FRUIT COMPANY

is another scheme of O. D. Taylor's which was organized in October, 1891, with an "authorized" capital of $1,000,000 for the purpose of cultivating and putting into fruit trees and vines, 2,500 acres of land which the incorporators claimed to have acquired. One thousand shares only at $400 per share were offered, each share representing an acre of land planted to fruit, payments to be made in four installments of 10,000 each, annually. The officers of the company are as follows: O. D. Taylor, president, The Dalles, Oregon; Clark C. Foster, vice-president, Saginaw, Mich.; Geo. R. Burnside, treasurer, Buffalo, N. Y.; C. F. Lav, secretary, Columbus, O.; A. E. Dunham, general manager, Cleveland, O. A prospective abounding in mis-statements and flowery language, and illustrated with colored lithographs from the sample books of Rochester, N. Y., nurserymen, was freely circulated. As to what success has been accomplished in floating this scheme, I am unable to learn. Trouble, however, has arisen among the officials, and suit has recently been begun in the United States Circuit Court in this city against O. D. Taylor by Harry W. Hogue as attorney for Vice-president Foster, of Saginaw, Mich., to enjoin him from assigning or transferring four negotiable promissory notes for $30,000 each, bearing date of Nov. 1, 1891, one becoming due on Nov. 1, 1892, and the others on the same date in 1893, 1894 and 1895. The complaint in very voluminous, but it alleges gross misrepresentation on the part of Taylor regarding the land, the language of the contract being exceedingly ambiguous. It further alleges that the Columbia River Trust Co. was illegally formed, that the concern never had any legal existence, and that Taylor never had any right whatever to convey the said property or any part thereof, except the Wilson ranch, and, moreover, that Taylor never held any legal title to the real property described. It is alleged also that Taylor is wholly insolvent, and has nothing with which to respond to damages. In view of the foregoing, it would appear an excellent policy to give O. D. Taylor and his various investment schemes a wide berth.

WAIFARER.

yet, since the stock market, as a rule, is content to confine its attention to subjects that do not stretch very far into to-morrow. Nevertheless, there is a growing confidence in the minds of the more thoughtful portion of the financial community that eventually the Reading road will pass into the hands of the Pennsylvania. This is the view which the INVESTOR took at the time the company went into the hands of receivers. That the attention of the public is being slowly drawn to this view of the matter is indicated by certain rumors that crept into existence this week in connection with a new loan that has just been negotiated by the Pennsylvania road. Of course it is folly to suppose that the Pennsylvania is borrowing money to buy the Reading at any such price as the stock is commanding to-day. The stock of the Reading is probably as near being intrinsically worthless as that of any railroad corporation, and no one familiar with the sound business policy of the Pennsylvania road would expect this company to pay much more for the Reading than it is actually worth on its merits. The case of the Pennsylvania in relation to the future acquirement of the Reading is very similar to that of the New York, New Haven & Hartford in relation to the acquirement of the New York & New England. In either case, if consolidation ensues, the purchasing road will be the only bona fide bidder, and will consequently pay a very low price.

BANKS AND THE GOLD SUPPLY.

The banks belonging to the Boston Clearing House Association this week voted to turn over one-half of their supply of gold to the national government in exchange for greenbacks. As the amount of gold held by these institutions was somewhat between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000, the treasury of the United States received anywhere from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 by this means. In itself, the action of the Boston banks resulted merely in furnishing the government with enough gold for about one day's shipment. The importance of the stand taken by these banks lies, of course, in the influence which, it is hoped, will be exerted over banks of other leading money centres. If the action of Boston banks is followed by similar action on the part of banks in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco and other places, the national treasury might be expected to gain a very large amount of gold, possibly $50,000,000 or $60,000,000, and thus be enabled to tide itself over its present embarrassment until next winter, when Congress will meet.

The stand taken by the Boston banks in coming to the aid of the government is pretty generally commended as an evidence of patriotism on the part of the banking community. Patriotism is always a pleasant thing to behold. It may not be worth all, there is much to commend in the action of the Boston banks. In the first place, is the present a time for the display of such patriotism as that now being evinced by certain of the banking institutions of the country? It is customary to recall with pride the part played by the banks in the days of the war in coming to the assistance of the government, but the present emergency is in no manner analogous to that one. At that time the country was forced into a great war for the sake of a great principle. To-day the banks of Boston and other cities are contributing in a powerful manner to the perpetuating of the most vicious policy that has ever affected the material interests of this country. This fact is so clear that no one can for a moment believe that the banks would be pursuing their present policy in relation to the treasury were their motive only one of patriotism. It can safely be asserted without further qualification that what is actuating the banks at this time is a desire to protect their loan account. If gold were to go to a premium at this time, the lending portion of the community would be in danger of great losses, on account either of the mercantile embarrassments that might be likely to occur, or of the payment of loans in a depreciated currency.

Of course the banks realize clearly enough that though they go on pouring their gold into the national treasury until the supply is exhausted, the time will come when, unless the silver law is repealed, gold must surely go to a premium. The plan which they are at present pursuing, in theory, at least, is to prevent a crisis as long as possible and in the meanwhile get themselves into the best condition possible to meet such an event when it can no longer be averted. Looked at, however, even from the standpoint of expediency, it is by no means assured that the banks are doing the wisest thing in parting with their gold in this way. The government's obligation to maintain gold payments to the very last minute is open to no discussion, but that the banks are under any obligation (either as patriots or as soundly managed business institutions) to assist the treasury department in this work is open to doubt.

It seems pretty clear now that the monetary conference will reassemble in Brussels May 30. It must be clear to even the dull-est mind by this time that the silver deluge can be stopped by no factitious methods. The American people are beginning to learn that the law of supply and demand regulates the price of silver, as of everything else. No one would fail to perceive the absurdity of holding an international conference for the purpose of devising means to restrict the price of wheat or iron within specified limits. Such a gathering, however, would be strictly analogous to the Brussels conference.

One of the results of Populist rule in Kansas is the withdrawal from business of the Knight Investment Company, who claim that under the laws recently passed relating to mortgages, the borrowing power of the state has been ruined, and that material injury to the future of the state is sure to follow these financial measures. As is generally known, foreclosure proceedings in that state are often prolonged, so that a period of two years is necessary to complete the foreclosure of a mortgage. The new law gives a further period of 18 months for redemption by the mortgagor, with the privilege to him of living on the foreclosed estate during that time, thus causing to the person holding a Kansas mortgage a possible delay of three and a half years before possession can be obtained, in case the mortgage is not paid at maturity. It is needless to say that under such conditions Kansas mortgages would be discriminated against decidedly by the eastern investor. The legislature, also, has passed a law prohibiting the making of contracts payable in gold. The course pursued by the Populists and the laws passed by the last legislature, if maintained, will completely strangle the borrowing power of Kansas and impair the state's progress materially.

IMPORTANT FOR GRAND DALLES INVESTORS.

The time has come for more direct and vigorous efforts to build up the town.

The great Cascade Canal and Locks are under contract to be completed within 18 months. The full appropriation has been made by Congress and the contractors are under $800,000 bonds to have the work done on time.

Work on the Portage railroad at Grand Dalles has been begun by the Columbia Railway and Navigation Company; not less than $400,000 having been spent for work already performed on its line which is to be equal in every respect to any standard gauge railway in the United States. For river steamers, wharf boats, grain elevators, warehouses, etc., including the portage, $5,400,000 have been secured, and $1,800,000 for branch roads, feeders to the main line; aggregating in all $7,200,000. The expenditure of such sums of money in connection with the completion of the Locks is extremely favorable to the building of Grand Dalles.

There is immediate need of dwelling houses. Mr. J. T. Rorick, recently of Bad Axe, Mich., now of Grand Dalles and to be editor of the Grand Dalles Herald, invites investors to assist in developing the town site by erection of cottages. His plan is indicated by the following proposed agreement:

It is hereby agreed between J. T. Rorick of Grand Dalles, Wash., of the first part, and ..... of ..... of the second part, that the said second party will within 20 days from the signing of this agreement, deliver to the said first party one contract, together with plans and specifications, for a residence (or other structure) to be erected on lot . . . , block . . . , on the plat of Grand Dalles, Klickitat Co., Wash., and at the time of delivering said contract will provide ample security for the payment of cost of erection of said residence, and that said building shall be completed and ready for occupancy as soon thereafter as may be. And said J. T. Rorick agrees to carry out the provisions of said contract.

Mr. Rorick will see that building contractors perform the work in a satisfactory manner. He will not handle the money. It can be paid through a bank here on bills approved by a bank out there. So far as relates to the money the business will be left entirely in the hands of the investor through his home bank.

Mr. Rorick is on the ground and sees both the necessity and the advantage of small dwellings.

They will help build the town and by so much increase the value of the property.

They will repay the owner. An investment of $750 or $1,000 will yield an income of not less than 10 per cent above taxes and insurance.

This is a most favorable time to build.

It is worthwhile to give this matter earnest and early attention and confer further with either of the undersigned.

My Dear Friend:-

I have met the new Com-and gave him your message wh.

he seemed happy to receive -

That he was a soldier is my only hope of an official friend in this Bureau - indeed my interest in the Soldier tells against me in this administration.

Since I have been off until now, all the Dep't Commissions have been soldiers and they have been willing and happy to have letters addressed to me by the Soldiers, answered officially, promptly & carefully - and I have thought that they held me in higher esteem in consideration of my life work for the Soldiers and their orphan children -

Judge Lechren knows nothing of this - there is no one here to tell him - but there are those here who will tell & I have told him that I assist the Soldiers & thus in prosecuting their claims against the Government - and that the desk I now hold should be filled by some other. I have no doubt it will be since my most formidable opponent is Mr. D.D. Murphy. First Depy. Commissioner of Pensions who was formerly Chief Clerk when such we were good friends - but later had a money transaction - and I know he feels very unhappy when he sees me. He also is or was until his appointment here a prominent Pension atty. I know that I have been in the habit of advising Soldiers generally not to employ an atty. but to prosecute their own claims & save their money -

I didn't mean to wait you all this - but must give you something as an apology or excuse for asking you - if you can consistently - to call Judge Lechren's attention to me - or my official record which I assume you will compare favorably with any clerk of my class -

This may not prevent my removal by the Secretary of the Interior (over the head of the Commissioner) but it may be the means of giving me an opportunity

Principles and ministries in the late war time and in the subsequent time of reconstruction.

From the public press you have observed the great success of the Congress already held which leads me to believe that this exhibit of morals is to be quite as notable as that of materials
this season here. and among the others
we earnestly desire to have the show-entitled to be.

Hoping for a favorable answer
and with very cordial remembrances

Dear General Howard:

Recalling the pleasure I had in meeting you at the Linn Club recently, I have thought to write asking if we could possibly have you here, at Danbury, to address the Children of our First Reformed Church Sunday School, in the Church (which also includes the historic old Church of Slapton Houses) on Children's Day - the second Sunday in June.

should be glad if you would also take the Second Service.
We have the largest school
& perhaps the most flourishing Church here. If you could come to us you would gratify a great many who would avail themselves of the opportunity to hear you. I should be glad to entertain you at my hotel and drive
you through the classic regions of Superstition Valley.

Let me add that

Maj: Gen. O. O. Howard.

Dear Sir:

I had the honor of serving under you during the late war, as Colonel of the 73rd Regt Penn<sup>a</sup> Vol. Bushbeck's Brig. Steinwehr's Div. 11th Corps, Army of Potomac.

The 11th Corps has frequently been quoted unjustly by historians of the late war, thereby doing injustice to it and the different Regts the corps consisted of. - A late instance of this fact was presented to me not long ago in a daily paper. A certain Regiment of a certain Corps, (other than the 73rd Regt Penn<sup>a</sup> Vol. 11th Army Corps) claimed to having been the first Regt to cross the Rappahannock River at Kelley's ford previous to the laying of the pontoon Bridge and to the Battle of Chancellorsville.

I hereby most emphatically denied the right of this claim to any other Regiment than my own, the 73rd Regt Penn<sup>a</sup> Vol. The facts are these, and <sup>you</sup> will kindly correct me, if wrong, and if right, please say so.

"In the early part of April 1863 the 73rd had been ordered to the Rappahannock River on picket duty, but especially to guard Kelley's ford.

[The text on this page is extremely faint and illegible. It appears to be a handwritten document, possibly a letter or a report, with several paragraphs of text. The ink is very light, and the paper shows signs of aging and wear.]

On arriving there, I next day received orders to detach three companies to guard Beverly ford also. This duty the 73<sup>d</sup> alone and exclusively performed until April 29th or 30th 1863 when it received Orders from your headquarters, to get ready to cross the River at dusk. Your orders were to embark at the mouth of Mud Creek, right below Kelley's ford. At dusk the 73<sup>d</sup> marched down the bluff, hidden from the view of the rebels, embarked as ordered in the skeleton pontoon boats and when dark pushed across the river, disembarked and deployed immediately as skirmishers, driving in the rebel pickets, taking them by surprise, for we captured their arms and spoiled their supper for them. We advanced far enough into Rebel territory with the 154th Regt. N. G. Vol. who had crossed over after us, connecting with the 73<sup>d</sup> on the left, to enable the pontoons to lay the bridge. The 73<sup>d</sup> remained on picket duty until day-break, when it was ordered to recross, get Breakfast, break up camp and then take charge of the 11th Corps wagon train, to follow and join the Corps again at Chancellorville, arriving there in the evening, marching all the way as flankers. Again the 11th Corps is spoken of disparagingly for its action in the Battle of Chancellorville and is partly blamed for the loss of it.

[The text on this page is extremely faint and illegible, appearing as ghosting or bleed-through from the reverse side. It seems to be a handwritten letter or document.]

This is rank injustice, for no portion of the army fought more valiantly than did Bushbeck's Reg. Steinschus Div. The Regiment lost heavily, & its commander being left on the battlefield, shot through the lung.

My object in writing this <sup>to</sup> you General, in obedience to a request of the Survivors Association of the 73<sup>d</sup> Regiment is to get your endorsement to the justice of my claim, that the 73<sup>d</sup> Regt Penn.<sup>a</sup> Vol. was the first Regt to cross the Rappahannock River at Kellegysford on April 29th 1863, previous to the laying of the pontoon Bridge.

Honor to whom honor is due. Let the truth prevail.

Will you have the kindness to answer this and oblige

Yours most Respectfully

Wm. Moore.

Dear Gen.
Howard,

I wish to join the company at West Point soon but I am only a little boy
now but I would like to be learning a little now and know something
I have got to do and so I want you to send me a list of things that I shall have to do
first.

If you could send them
on a piece of paper it would do and God
would like to be learning a little now.
I am eight years old but 635

I could practice a little before I go to West Point.

So I will thank you very much if you will write a list of things that I have got to do first and send them to me
and every little chance I get I will practice a little.

I have a uniform
that I can put on.

I was at Castle William at the time of the Naval Parade and want to see you very much.
