During the day General McPherson sent the division, of General Sweeny, of the 16th Corps, to Lay's Ferry, with instructions to effect a lodgment on the opposite bank of the Oostenaula, and cover the laying of a pontoon bridge, under the direction of Captain C.B. Reese, chief engineer of the department.

He moved to Lay's Ferry as directed, pushed across one brigade, which, in conjunction with the artillery in position on the west side of the river, promptly dislodged the enemy from the opposite bank, but hearing a rumor that the enemy was attempting a crossing above to cut him off from the main army the division commander withdrew everything to the west side and retired half a mile to a less exposed position. The next morning he moved back to the river, and this time threw over his division, constructed a bridge-head, and laid a pontoon bridge, under the direct supervision of Colonel Buell. Not having received a report from Generals Sweeny or Dodge, I am unable to give a specific account of the engagement that succeeded this crossing. It appears, however, in collateral reports that the enemy attempted to drive back a part of this division, but failed, and was defeated in action. -

Maj. General John A. Logan, Commanding Army of the Tennessee.

General:-

I have your application for the services of General Corse, which I grant, because I want you to have a good division commanders. But I beg you to see that no injustice is done to General Sweeny. I have noticed for some time a growing dissatisfaction on the part of General Dodge with General Sweeny. It may be personal. See that General Dodge prefers specific charges and specifications, and you, as the army commander, must be the judge of the sufficiency of the charges. No one but the commander of an army can arrest and send away a general; it is a high power, but I construe the power to reside with the commanders of my three armies, because each has a command other than troops here on the spot. You, as commander of the Army of the Tennessee, should judge as to the cause

Mr. General John A. Logan, Cincinnati, Ohio.

General:
I have your application for the services of General Coker, and I regret, because I am sure to have a good deal of business, that I had not to see that an invitation is sent to General Coker. I have not had for some time a proper classification on the part of what I have to do for him. It is an honor, and the General is a valuable officer and specialist, and you, as the only one to see the value of his services to the country, I am sure, will be glad to have him. I am sure you will be glad to have him. I am sure you will be glad to have him. I am sure you will be glad to have him.

of arrest and see that no injustice is done a general officer. You can see how cruel it would be to a brave and sensitive gentleman and officer to be arrested, deprived of his command, and sent to the rear at this time. I do not believe General Dodge would do willingly an act of injustice, but still you are the one to judge. I fear that General Sweeny will feel ~~that~~ that even I am influenced against him to befriend General Corse, but it is not so. I give up General Corse because the good of the service demands that at this crisis you should have good division commanders.

I am, with respect, your obedient servant,

W. T. SHERMAN,
Major General, Commanding.
