

WARREN RANDOLPH BURGESS, Undersecretary of the Treasury for Monetary Affairs. Graduating from Brown University Phi Beta Kappa, earning the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at Columbia University, his career as a banker and scholar, and his recognition as an author had already won him wide acclaim before he accepted governmental appointment. His years of active leadership in high finance and his sound knowledge of money brought sorely needed talent to the incredibly complicated and difficult task of managing the largest government financing of peacetime history. Tireless and brilliant public servant, he retains his equanimity in spite of criticism, supported by an integrity never challenged. As we honor him, he honors us.

Honoris Causa, DOCTOR OF LAWS
