

CHARLES AUSTIN CARY, of the Class of 1910. Neither his magna cum laude baccalaureate nor membership in Delta kappa Epsilon could take from this salty Downeaster his Machias twang or the heady individuality of his character. Happiest at the helm of his beloved sloop, appropriately christened FOGGY, cruising the unspoiled waters, fir-laden islands, and bayberry-scented shores of Narraguagus Bay, his own mind is never befogged as he plots the course of his efforts on behalf of this College, or of other humanitarian activity – local, national, and international – which has carried him to the foreign shores of Europe and Africa. Distinctive experience as a Vice President and member of the Executive Committee of the DuPont Company anticipated his imaginative and sound chairing of the Visiting Committee as a Bowdoin Trustee, and his conceiving and establishing the invaluable Faculty Development Fund. Presently his exemplary leadership of the Capital Campaign ensure its success and Bowdoin's continuing leadership in undergraduate liberal education.
