

CYRUS STUART CHING, coming west to Boston from his native Prince Edward Island, quickly progressing from motorman to executive in Boston transit, graduate in law, experienced in industry and in the service of his fellow man, his sagacious yet homespun wisdom, his unprejudiced optimism, and his persuasive amiability have been invaluable in the service of his adopted country in keeping its productivity always at its peak by bringing labor and management together; even now accepting a new assignment from a new administration in an important area of labor relations, his own life has proved what others have only been able to write about.

Honoris Causa, DOCTOR OF LAWS
