

CRAWFORD HALLOCK GREENEWALT, chemist, engineer, executive, musician, machinist, ornithologist, and author. Personifying the liberally educated man, you have by your example demonstrated your own frequently and lucidly expressed precepts of personal freedom and incentive, of high achievement, of individuality in large enterprise, just as you have decried conformity. To all your myriad interests you bring an acuteness of mind driven by a boundless wellspring of energy, and an inventiveness of spirit that lets you master endless new areas of endeavor. Many times honored in years past for your engineering and business accomplishment, today you are honored by a college long involved in ornithology, always admiring of the rugged individualist and the uncommon man, for your newer science and your newer skills, for your creativity as an artist and an author.
