

VARAZTAD HOVHANNES KAZANJIAN, of Boston, plastic and oral surgeon whom hundreds of wounded veterans bless for his discoveries and work in skin grafting and the removal of facial and other scars, decorated by the British government for his services in World War II, honored today partly because he is the father of a Bowdoin son but chiefly because Bowdoin cherished those who by scientific research and skill have benefited the human race.

Honoris Causa, DOCTOR OF SCIENCE