

ASA SMALLIDGE KNOWLES, of the Class of 1930, of Toledo, Ohio, university president, a skillful administrator with wide experience for one so young; Dean of the School of Business Administration of Northeastern University and Rhode Island State College, serving brilliantly as President of the Associated Colleges of Upper New York following his war service, then Vice President of Cornell University, and now President of the University of Toledo, one of the most important urban institutions in the Middle West; member of several engineering societies and author of important book on man power and industrial management; representing by his own career also his other Bowdoin associates who have been in the important and fertile fields of college administration.

Honoris Causa, DOCTOR OF LAWS