

EDMUND SIXTUS MUSKIE, Governor of the State of Maine. Bachelor of Arts of a sister Androscoggin college, Phi Beta Kappa, and graduate in law of a great university, his career typifies the worthy goal of straightforward service. Naval officer, member of the bar, state legislator, now Governor, and in Maine necessarily perspicacious master of Republican as well as Democratic politics, his skill and sagacity in the management of the affairs of man and of state have brought him broad recognition and have given the citizens of Maine an almost unparalleled opportunity to demonstrate their judgment of character and ability in the placement of man over party. An idealist believing with Woodrow Wilson that politics is the science of the ordered progress of society along the lines of greatest usefulness, the programs he has sponsored make visions real.
