

JAMES KELLUM SMITH, architect, of New York City, graduate of Amherst, member of the firm of Bowdoin's college architects, McKim, Mead and White, who has served in the same capacity Amherst, Trinity, Vermont, Wesleyan, and as consultant Northwestern and Johns Hopkins; President of the American Academy in Rome since 1937; with a distinguished record in both wars, serving in World War II as lieutenant colonel; Trustee of Pratt Institute; honored here not only for his friendly and generous insight in designing and helping us to build the Union, the Swimming pool, the Classroom Building but also for his service in connection with his firm's oversight of all our building problems; one of America's foremost architects.

Honoris Causa, DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS