

FREDERICK WILLIAM ANTHOENSEN, of Portland, one of the country's great printers; like so many other good Americans of Danish stock, starting as a compositor for the Southworth Press and developing his craft and art so that now in expert opinion few can equal and none surpass him in the designing and printing of fine books; generous donor to our Library; a local and distinguished successor in the long line from Gutenberg and Caxton to William Morris and Thomas Bird Mosher; modest, conscientious, striving always for excellence, master of an art that helps men read and love good books.

Honoris Causa, MASTER OF ARTS
