

IRVING BABBITT, Professor of French Literature at Harvard University; lecturer at Bowdoin in our Institute of Literature, who by his writings and his teaching has made most important contributions to the intellectual life of America; who has been justly termed one of the most remarkable of American critics, upon most questions fundamentally right and very often right alone; whose service to literature in the American college places all colleges of liberal arts and sound learning in his debt.

Honoris Causa, DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS
