

SAMUEL TRASK DANA, of the Class of 1904; Master of Forestry of Yale University; honorary Doctor of Science of Syracuse University; now Dean of the School of Forestry and Conservation of the University of Michigan; whose career in national, state, and university work has been marked by unusual industry and ability; well known in Maine as formerly Forest Commissioner in the State; so well regarded by his profession as to have held the office of president of the Society of American Foresters; one of the pioneers and leaders in work of which the importance and extent the American people are only too slowly beginning to realize; properly honored by the College of the Whispering Pines.

Honoris Causa, DOCTOR OF SCIENCE