

ROY ANDERSON FOULKE, of the Class of 1919, of New York City; economic statistician; for many years an important member of the internationally known organization, Dun and Bradstreet; author of important and literary monographs on problems of commercial credit, bringing into business the cool and skilful analysis of the scholar; devoted to the College, one of the most active Directors of the Alumni Fund since its foundation; and yesterday elected Chairman of the Board; Chairman of the Placement Committee of the New York alumni, generously matching his time against the time of Bowdoin seniors and often overlooking their faults to find for them employment even in days of depression, all the time helping others and thinking little of himself.

Honoris Causa, MASTER OF ARTS