

JAMES EDWARD FREEMAN, Bishop of Washington; one of the great leaders not only for his own church but of the forces of liberal religion in this country; known to thousands of his fellow citizens for clear courageous utterance; builder of a great cathedral; representing here today other leaders in all walks of life who find refreshment and inspiration in the summer air of Maine; one whose career shows that a college training is not essential for vigorous intellectual and spiritual leadership; now gladly honored by a college whose graduates in the nation's capitol have brought distinction on their Alma Mater, to whom we gladly add one of Washington's leading citizens.

Honoris Causa, DOCTOR OF DIVINITY
