

ROSCOE JAMES HAM, a graduate of Harvard, Professor of German in the College, primarily a teacher inculcating accuracy and a sense of excellence in his students; without a superior as college instructor in elementary German; a linguist who is giving new courses in the language of our gallant ally, Russia; worthily honored for his own distinctive quality and character and as the representative of the faculty of today, that body to whom, when all is said and done, the College is most in debt for whatever educational service Bowdoin can render; unsparing in his own studies, giving himself without rest or stint to his students.

Honoris Causa, DOCTOR OF HUMANE LETTERS
