

Daniel Francis Hanley, of the Class of 1939; Doctor of Medicine of Columbia University; inspiring and warm friend to Bowdoin students, alumni and faculty for more than three decades; known far beyond the limits of the campus and the borders of the state, his skill in medicine has been acknowledged by his peers at home and abroad; his administrative and organizational talents have well served his community and State; his College has benefitted from the dedication, wisdom and affection he has brought to the Art of Healing. Physician and significant contributor to the common good.

Honoris Causa, Doctor of Science