

John Bowers Matthews, Jr., of the Class of 1943, summa cum laude; Doctor of Philosophy of Harvard University; Joseph C. Wilson Professor of Business Administration at the Harvard Business School; whose keen scholarship has been implemented by an invigorating and innovative humanism; long concerned with social and ethical issues, he has asserted the importance of business responsibility; corporate leaders respect his advice for its pertinence and guidance; a patient and understanding teacher, he has instilled in his students the principles of tact, patience, judgment and ability; his career is distinguished by high standards and service.

Honoris Causa, Doctor of Laws