

BOWDOIN COLLEGE
Commencement 1985

ELEANOR HOLMES NORTON, graduate of Antioch College, of Yale Graduate School and Yale Law School, you are being honored today because you would free us from the shadows of our past. The first woman to chair the United States Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, you helped create the policies and laws that are reforming discrimination in the marketplace. You are recognized as an authority on affirmative action, comparable worth, labor management and race relations. Throughout your legal career, you have lived your commitment to equality and freedom. Co-author of Sex Discrimination and the Law: Causes and Remedies, you now teach at Georgetown University Law School, where you continue to speak out for what you believe.

You once visited Bowdoin to deliver the John Brown Russwurm Lecture. Today we welcome you back to recognize you for your continuous struggle to assure equal opportunity for all. Honoris causa, DOCTOR OF LAWS.
