

BOWDOIN COLLEGE
Commencement 1985

CAROLYN WALCH SLAYMAN, graduate of Swarthmore College and Rockefeller University, as research scientist and professor of human genetics and physiology, you have played an important role in the understanding and treatment of inherited disorders. Your research in protein transport across cell membranes complements the outstanding teaching that led to your appointment as Chairman of the Department of Human Genetics at Yale University. Your roles with the National Institutes of Health and your work on several professional boards attest to the high regard in which your colleagues hold you.

Maine native and daughter of a Bowdoin alumnus, you have been a devoted and loyal worker for Bowdoin yourself as a member of the Board of Overseers since 1976. Today we honor you for your achievements and welcome you to another relationship with the Bowdoin community. Honoris causa, DOCTOR OF SCIENCE.
