

ELWYN BROOKS WHITE, of North Brooklin, Maine, and New York City; Bachelor of Arts of Cornell; Doctor of Letters several times over; author, essayist, and editor; writing the best prose of the day; humorous, witty, and kindly commentator on the modern American scene, making the New Yorker an indispensable magazine for all who understand that One Man's Meat is not necessarily the Other Man's Poison; fittingly honored by a college that holds American literature and American letters in high regard.

Honoris Causa, DOCTOR OF LETTERS