

Bowd. College.

Dear Lawrence.

Thinking that you might return before I did next term, I write these few words to tell you of the state of your things.

The most of them as you perceive are here. Your bureau I left in the old room, as the present inmates were careful fellows & would do it no damage; & as I thought you would wish to clean up your room, & lay down your carpet, before you would like to have it in your room. The key of it you will find inside of the cover of your Latin lexicon which is in your secretary. Your Classical dictionary you will find in my room in the closet, together with some of the papers &c of yours. The key to my room you can get of the tutor. The key of the closet is in the little draw at the top of my desk. Your washstand is lost as far as I can see, irrecoverably. The key of your bureau will unlock also the top draw in your secretary, where are some of your books & things. You must excuse ^{me} for leaving your things in the condition I have. I should have fixed your room wh ready to be moved into when you should come back, But when the time of your return would be, I knew not. I knew only of your wishes that you wanted, ~~that~~ I should have care that your things might not be lost. I believe they are all safe. If ^{you should miss} any thing write & perhaps I can give you some information. If you wish to see the bureau you can find it in the old room 32, of which the Tutor has the key. Diogenes still has your carpet.

Lawrence, when I return next term, I hope to meet you in 23, N.H. settled your ~~last~~ studies of this term made wh & happy in the consciousness that you once more have your health, that once again you are permitted to strive with us to climb up the high mount of Fame. Remember me as your true friend, & loving brother at least in the Peruvian,

Two of your cane bottomed chairs are in my room.

N. B. If you come this winter vacation & have the other key to my door lock with you, please leave it with some one who will give it to either of the Cummings of the Freshmen class. If you do not come till the beginning of next term, please to see it is given to one of them, and you will much oblige your friend - George
