We brought the wood to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington. It was sent to the Bureau of Forestry. It came from Alaska, coming down the Yukon River and into the Bering Sea; through the strait of that name and westward along the Siberian Coast and through the Polar Basin south of the North pole into Robeson Channel, Kennedy Channel, and Kane Basin. The wood was as solid and sound as the day it left the Shores of Alaska. Perhaps it took 5 to 10 years to make the drift. The wood is cedar. This summer 1940 the Morrissey was the first ship to visit Dr. Kane's winter quarters no other ship but the Brig observation post, looking down into one of the old Eskimo Houses."

									given us by the Hydrographic Office Navy Dept. Wash. These papers are furnished by the H.O. The lad in the Picture is filling in the paper with the necessary data then it's put in a Bottle, and sealed with Red Sealing Wax. Sometimes we get reports from these Bottles picked up a year after, sometimes two years, having drifted several thousand miles. In doing this we furnish data to the Hydrographic Office Showing Just in what
