

REMARKS OF SENATOR OWEN BREWSTER AT THE DEDICATION OF THE NEW PLANT OF THE SACO-
LOWELL COMPANY AT SACO, MAINE, FRIDAY NOON,
FEBRUARY 22, 1952

This new plant is a tribute to the truth of what Henry Ford once said that "New England is the greatest reservoir of industrial talent the world has ever known".

In speaking of New England Mr. Ford meant the spirit and the talent that are now peculiarly the property of the State of Maine.

This building will long stand as a monument to the vision and the courage and the industrial genius of all those who have cooperated in making this enterprise possible.

Dedicated to the production of machines to make life more comfortable this great company of workers turns to war production to serve their nation's need.

Let us all look forward with confidence to the day in the not distant future when the world may be once more at peace and textile machinery may move from this great plant to all the corners of the earth to make life more pleasant for everyone everywhere.