New Orleans, La., Feb. 13th 1866. Learned that the Bureau contemplated making limited advances of $20,000 to needy persons in the south. Thinks that if the same, i.e., pork and corn or meal were purchased by the Bureau, the benefit would be much greater. Estimates that $100,000 would be distributed would give employment to 33,000 families, enabling them to add 1000 bales to the cotton crop. In July 1866, which has been done for all other officers of Boylston Regt. It will soon be possible to pay bounties from date of acceptance, etc.

Was wounded at battle of Kumpass, Nov. 26, 1866. Receiving was assigned to 12th V.R. on 5th of July, 1867, was discharged, paid at Washington, and returned back to Germany. Arriving at Phila., Pa., had all his money. After many vain endeavors to get work, enlisted again, in July, 1868, in 12th V.R. was sent to Independence Battery, on the 20th of Dec., 1868, was ordered to report to 1st Lt. J. B. Riggs. For months and many years, at that place, one Richmond was brutally treated by Capt. Riggs and compelled to do slave work, making and forming the arms requested, and again to return to his company. Requiring a bitter life, he determined to desert. Receiving pay on May 8th, 1869, he gave up report to Capt. Riggs for keeping the place in an envelope in a book saying that he would get it at any time. Shortly after, Mr. Riggs threw the book in Tom's face, hence taking the above said envelope from the trunk, as I described.

Subsequently, on being reduced to starvation, he enlisted again and was sent to Washington where he was arrested. On trial, he was sentenced to 3 years imprisonment, to wear a ball to his left eye (one wounded in service). Is, etc., etc. etc.

Became the General to do something for them.

Feb. 27th. Respectfully forwarded to the Adjutant General Office, Md. I earnestly recommend a mitigation of this severe punishment to the extent of no more, of dispensing with the ball and chains signed. O.O. Howard
