Dear General Howard,

We have just had a regret at the eleventh hour for a little dinner that we gave tomorrow evening. Mr. Upham and I want you to come (if you possibly can) to late the macaw site and help us entertain our friends. I write in great haste. Believe yours,

E. K. Upham

Major General O. O. Howard, U.S. Army.

My dear General:

I found your letter of the 3rd instant on my return home yesterday. I at once went to see Judge Bronough, and have been there several times since, but thus far have failed to find him, but I shall keep on, when I am in town, until I find him. In the meantime, by the merest luck, I ran across Chambreau this afternoon, whom I had not seen for months before, and I had a talk with him about the matter. I could not gather exactly what Bronough had written you about the matter, nor what his opinions were, but I did get hold of what Chambreau wants, for he talked over the matter with me a long time ago, and he repeated it, with much more, now. It is substantially this: he claims that manuscript and thinks he ought to have it. He was deeply disappointed at your final conclusions regarding its publication, for he had looked forward to it for a very long time, and thought he was going to receive some recompense for it. What he wants now is, that you shall expunge from it every reference to yourself, that you would not be willing to have go in print, and send him the rest of it. His family take a deep interest in this matter, and, probably, magnify its importance, and yet they think that you are keeping something that belongs to their father. He speaks most kindly of you, and of the years of kindness and friendship you have shown him, and still he feels that you are keeping from him something that is his, and that you have no right to keep.

Now, I have written freely according to my observation, and not as Ned would like to have it stated, but I feel that you will want to know just the exact situation. Ned says that he got Mr. Mitchell to write you a once, in regard to this same matter, but that you never answered the letter. He seems to have the idea that the historical matter, in the work, is of great value, and he says that it is on this account that Bronaugh has taken it up.

From my knowledge of the case, and of the persistency with which Ned dwells on the matter, I should advise that you send it to him, after eliminating everything that pertains to yourself which you might object to. I doubt if Ned is able to do much with it, but so long as it is withheld he has a grievance which grows in size every day. However, I shall write you more when I have seen Judge Bronaugh.

I rejoiced over your deliverance from shipwreck, but as I did not even know that you were on board the long delayed steamer, until it was safe in port, I could share the anxiety of your family during all the anxious days. Give my love to Mrs. Howard and all the dear family.

Affectionately yours,

My dear General:

I thank you for the kind letter written just on the tail of your departure for Europe. I love my Savior, that you know. The officer, your informant, must have given you a false picture indeed of my backslidings, let me hope hardly a faithful one; am not at work as I should be, herein is my danger. Pray for me.

Always faithfully yours,

Dear Comrade

I want to thank you for your presence and what you said to us at the installation ceremonies on Tuesday night at No. 3 Grant, Post.

Reminiscing what you said about the American home, I want you to honor my home by accepting the enclosed invitation to the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of my marriage.

Our home has been an unusually happy one, and we have tried to make it an ideal Christmas.

Dear Sir,

Having been very much interested in your article published in the Herald upon the writings of Dr. Upland, I wish to ask you where I can find the volumes you have alluded to in your notice of the writer.

I am also a student of the Gospels, and have for forty years followed a line of thought which has led me to conclusions relative to the progressive character of the progressive character of Messiah's work in Luke and John.

My Dear Sir:

I desire to hand you, enclosed, a letter I have just received from Mr. Kirchberger, as also a copy of my answer to the same. This correspondence speaks for itself.

I have no doubt but that, upon reconsideration, you will find the stand I take in this matter, perfectly correct — and as guarding yourself as well as myself against any possible disagreeable consequences. I wrote to Mr. Kirchberger as I did, more in your defense than in my own.

Hoping you well, and assuring you of my highest consideration, I remain,

Obediently yours,

My Dear Sir,

I regret to write you, but I am under the necessity of informing you that the change of the price of your product, as fixed in my letter of November 21st, is not in accordance with the terms of our agreement. It appears to me that the price fixed is not only below the market price, but also below the cost of production. I trust that you will see the necessity of readjusting the price to a figure that is fair to both parties.

Dear Sir:

I have your favor of the day before yesterday, from which I learn that you have made "a more verbal translation of the address".

I deem it my duty, not only towards myself, but also towards my fellow passengers - to remind you of the fact that this address did not emanate from any one person, but from THE PASSENGERS of the "Spree." - Both, the German as well as the English version of the address, have been decided upon by the passengers, and true copies of both, have been handed to Capt. Wellinger.

I therefore, beg leave to remind you that neither you nor General Howard have the right to make any change in the wording of the document.

In addressing you thus, I am not moved by any personal motive whatsoever, but merely want to go on record as opposed to...

Dear General. Your kind letter came to hand and everything is attended to. Yesterday Mr. Weicker sends me the German resolutions, whereupon I informed him, that upon your request a more verbal translation was made. He protests and I answered him as per enclosed letter, which I presume covers the point.

I beg to enclose copy of my German translation and remain very sincerely yours

Dear Sir,

I acknowledge receipt of your favor of this day in reply to which I beg to say:

The passengers of the Spree have asked Mr. Howard to kindly address the Captain in their behalf, and the English letter was submitted to the approval of the passengers, who ordered a Committee of three to have this address translated and engrossed. The English address is perfectly intact and the German translation, which you forwarded to me at so late a date is a different address entirely, which you were not authorized to make. I perfectly agree with the General that the translation should be as near as possible to the original tenor of the address. If you assumed the right of making a new version of the address in question, you went beyond the scope of your functions, which latter were those of a Secretary of the meeting, whose business it was to keep the minutes of our resp. meetings. Without being personal permit me to say to you as the said Secretary, that if y you had attended to your duties as secretary as well as you now attempt to attend to the Committee's business, it would not be necessary for me to refer to the minutes of our business meeting on board the "Spree" to prove to you, that only a verbal translation of the English resolutions is admissible, and that if we were to adopt your own German version, we would be doing something which we had no right to do.

I am happy to see you so ready to defend the rights of the passengers of the "Spree", and assure you that the same motives no doubt prompted the concern to request me to make a verbal translation of the Address.

Permit me to add that the entire matter is well attended to and the committee of three in charge thereof is perfectly competent and does not require outside assistance.
