My dear Sir :

Yours of the 22d instant received. I find that all of the Special and many of the General Orders of General Howard will have to be copied in this office in order to furnish the files requested by you. If Captain Wotherspoon will send a list of such orders as he has found it will save this office just that much copying.

The furnishing of these files will be rather slow work, as the copying can only be done when current work is slack.

My Dear General:-

The Presbytery of Philadelphia North holds its Spring meeting in our Church (The Market Square Church, Germantown) on Tuesday, April 17th next, and we are anxious to have a public meeting to consider the subject of "Temperance" on the evening of that day. Our desire is that you and Rev. Dr. Cuyler be present and speak for us.

Please let me know whether you will be in this part of the world about that time, and I will take a run over to New York, and make final arrangements about your coming here.

Dear Comrade:--I enclose you herewith a few circulars and notices for my new book, "Memoirs of the War." I think you will be interested in this work as it no doubt covers Scenes, Incidents, Battles, Marches, etc., in which you most likely took an honorable part. I have taken great pains to make my narrative of events as comprehensive as possible, and trust the "Memoirs" will be read by the comrades with satisfaction, pleasure and profit. While it would be impossible to go into a minute and detailed history of the whole war in so small a volume as this, yet I have tried to cover as much of the ground as I could, in the space allotted me.

My book is now out of press and is ready for distribution. It will contain 427 pages, and is nicely illustrated, giving both comical and serious phases of the war, and has in it 27 splendid half-tone photos of the officers of the old 10th regiment, together with an elegant portrait of General James D. Morgan of the 14th Army Corps--our former colonel.

The "Memoirs" will be full of special interest to any old soldier who served in the engagements mentioned in my circular, as well as to soldiers who fought elsewhere for the preservation of the Union, as it tells in an unostentatious simple way, the story of the war, just as it occurred 32 years ago.

If the comrades to whom this letter is sent will speak a kindly word for the "Memoire" to the boys who touched elbows with us in the long-ago I will esteem it a great personal favor.

I will be exceedingly glad to hear from all who receive this letter. Write and tell me how time has been dealing with you since last we met.

I am comrade, yours most truly,

E. A. WILSON,

Late Capt. Co. G. 10th Ill. Inf'ty.

MEMOIRS OF THE WAR.

"READ WHAT THE PRESS SAYS OF IT."

CAPT. E. A. WILSON, Cleveland, Ohio, formerly of the Tenth Illinois infantry, has just published an interesting book of 437 pages, with portraits and illustrations, under the above title price, $1.10. The volume covers four years of service with the army of the Cumberland with the Reserve, Fourteenth, Sixteenth and Seventeenth corps. While pursuing the history and fortunes of these commands, it is not a mere historical sketch of their operations, but rather a historically connected cluster of memories, incidents and anecdotes of one who saw four years of active service—something that is of more interest to an old soldier or the ordinary reader than mere history. Much of the material is from the author's diary, and from letters written home from camp, so that the daily soldier life is a truthful story written without exaggeration. Capt. Wilson is to be congratulated on the publication of his story. His experience as a private, non-commissioned and commissioned officer is well told, will be enjoyed by his comrades, and is a valuable contribution to the student of the history of the war.—The Ohio Soldier, Chillicothe, O.

In his pleasant volume of memories Captain Wilson does not forget to follow the example of his brother writers in the preparation of a preface to tell his public, among other things, that it is a task to write out and prepare a work of this kind, "yet if its perusal affords an hour of pleasure to any old comrade, we shall feel doubly repaid for all our labor and pains"—a bit of solicitude which always seems the more strange, if our friend will smile at what is intended in a jocular way when the price of the book is considered. Really, however, the reader who delights in army reminiscences gets inconceivably more than a dollar's worth from Captain Wilson's volume. The Captain was born at Guilford, Medina County, Ohio, is a resident of Cleveland, and although he enlisted in Illinois, is rightfully entitled to be called an Ohio man. For this reason the brief official record of the Tenth Illinois Regiment, which precedes the narrative, will be more interesting to friends in that State.

Captain Wilson enlisted in 1861 and served until 1865, consequently the record covers the entire war. It will certainly be read with interest by a great many old soldiers and their descendants.—Cleveland Leader.

These memoirs will be found of intense interest to any old soldier who served in any of the 46 engagements described in the book, and indeed to all whom the war is not entirely so much a thing of the past that they do not enthuse again as they read, talk, or even think of the old days of '61-'65. The volume contains 427 pages, is nicely illustrated by half-tone portraits of officers of the 10th Ill., and of Gen. James D. Morgan, the Colonel of the regiment. Capt. Wilson has taken great pains to make the narrative as comprehensive as possible, and has succeeded in laying before us most graphic pictures of the scenes we visited with him.—National Tribune, Washington, D. C.

A SOLDIER'S STORY.

Capt. Ephraim A. Wilson of this city, Buckeye born and bred, had the experience of many other Ohio boys of being "away from home" when the war broke out and the call for volunteers came. He enlisted at Dixon, Ill., in the Tenth Illinois regiment, was rapidly promoted, ending in being captain of his company, and after active service to nearly the end of the war in Missouri, Tennessee, Mississippi, Alabama and under Sherman in all the fighting from Chattanooga to South Carolina, was wounded severely in a fight with Wade Hampton's cavalry at Rivers Bridge, S. C., in February, 1865, and was mustered out after the close of the war. Capt. Wilson has given his "Memoirs of the War" in a volume printed in this city. It is a true soldier's story, open to criticism on the side of literary method and artistic finish, but on the other hand acquiring interest as the unstudied record of a soldier's life, which will recall to many readers similar experience of their own. Among the "late unpleasantness." All such records are interesting as personal narratives and with the flight of time become valuable materials for history.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

My dear old Commander:

A biographical sketch in last Sunday's Phila. Press renewed scenes in my mind of long ago, when you, in prime of manhood, was my commander in our country's darkest days. The remembrance of those times impels me to drop a line to you on the eve of your retirement from actual military life. It seems but a very short time since that my Regiment, the 64th N.Y., marched into Camp Alexandria and became as one of your military family. I can see the line as it winds its way to the foot of the little elevation whereon you had your headquarters. I can see you standing and scanning the faces of the rank and file as they passed, and can see the expression of deep disappointment that came over your face as that old, gray-headed Captain (my father) of Co. I, passed. I can see the daily drills and other duties of camp life passing before me - the picket line on Monmouth's Hill, the advance on Manassas March 4, 1862.

the embarkation at Alexandria for Ship Point; all the trials and sufferings of the Peninsula campaign and the Battle of Fair Oaks, how my father there was wounded, and I can see the doctors, as I saw them then, as they amputated your arm and how pale and death-like you looked when I went into the little hut, where you lay, to ask your permission to accompany father home. All this passes like one grand panorama before me, each scene so rapid yet so vivid. Many years, dear General, have passed since then and few compared with this many that their touched elbows, remain to tell the tales of war - each year some of us pass beyond the river, and what strange feeling of brotherly love we entertain for one another as we are spared and the traces of time leaves its imprint upon us.

I see General Nelson A. Miles will probably be your successor as Commander of the Eastern Dept. How stranger - he who was once a lieutenant on your staff, but a man dearly loved by all. It does my soul good to know he has risen to the top of the ladder. When you see him try and remember me to him.

My father, Captain R. H. Remick, is still living at the age of 82, although having had two paralytic ^{struck} is quite active. He resides

My dear General

The Bradbury Chapel is to be opened next Sunday April first and we want you with us and preside at the meeting. It will be somewhat of an informal meeting, Dr. Hunt and we trust a host of your friends will be there to greet you. As you are so versatile on every subject of good government of temperance and religion I know of no better man in the United States more competent to give Bradbury Chapel and the grand missionary work of temperance and religion an enthusiastic send off. This is the work and the place that you and I have often talked about and where I have hoped and prayed, (and still do) to have you take up and lay the foundation for a glorious work now and hereafter. When generations men women and children will rise up and call you blessed. Now my dear General, God put it in your heart to go to the rescue of the mission in New York and He raised you up friends over
