Dear General

In his interesting paper in the Pall Mall Magazine for April, upon the decline and fall of Napoleon , General Viscount Wolseley of the British Army , has this to say of especial interest to us as Americans , in protest of the theory of the British optimist based upon the results achieved in our own Civil war with volunteer troops :

" The military system of every great European power at this moment rises in evidence to protest against the theory of the British optimist on this subject, because in the Confederate war of 1861-65 great armies were quickly raised , that fought well against armies similarly constituted and equally undisciplined and untrained , it is often urged by men who know nothing of war that in case of invasion we could in like manner put hundreds of thousands of men in the field who would be fit to meet the regular troops of the invader . You might just as well hope to win the Derby with an imperfectly trained horse . "

The position of General Wolseley of course gives such an expression on his part great weight. As atypical American soldier of the Army as well as conversant with our volunteers of the war, the Journal would esteem itself under deep obligation to yourself if you would kindly favor it with a reply expressing your views on this matter --whether it behooves this nation, in the light of modern developments in the science of warfare, to change the established policy of a small military contingent, sufficient merely to police our frontier and garrison the more important of our coast defences, and to establish in its stead a large standing army upon the European basis as to efficiency and discipline; or whether we may safely continue, as in the past, to rely upon the organized national reserve, the militia of the States, backed by the love of country, loyalty and zeal of our people to assure them of the same great army of defence that we had in '65 before the surrender, invincible against all comers despite smokeless powder, gatlings and rapid fire ordnance?

I regret to say

Gen. O. O. Howard,

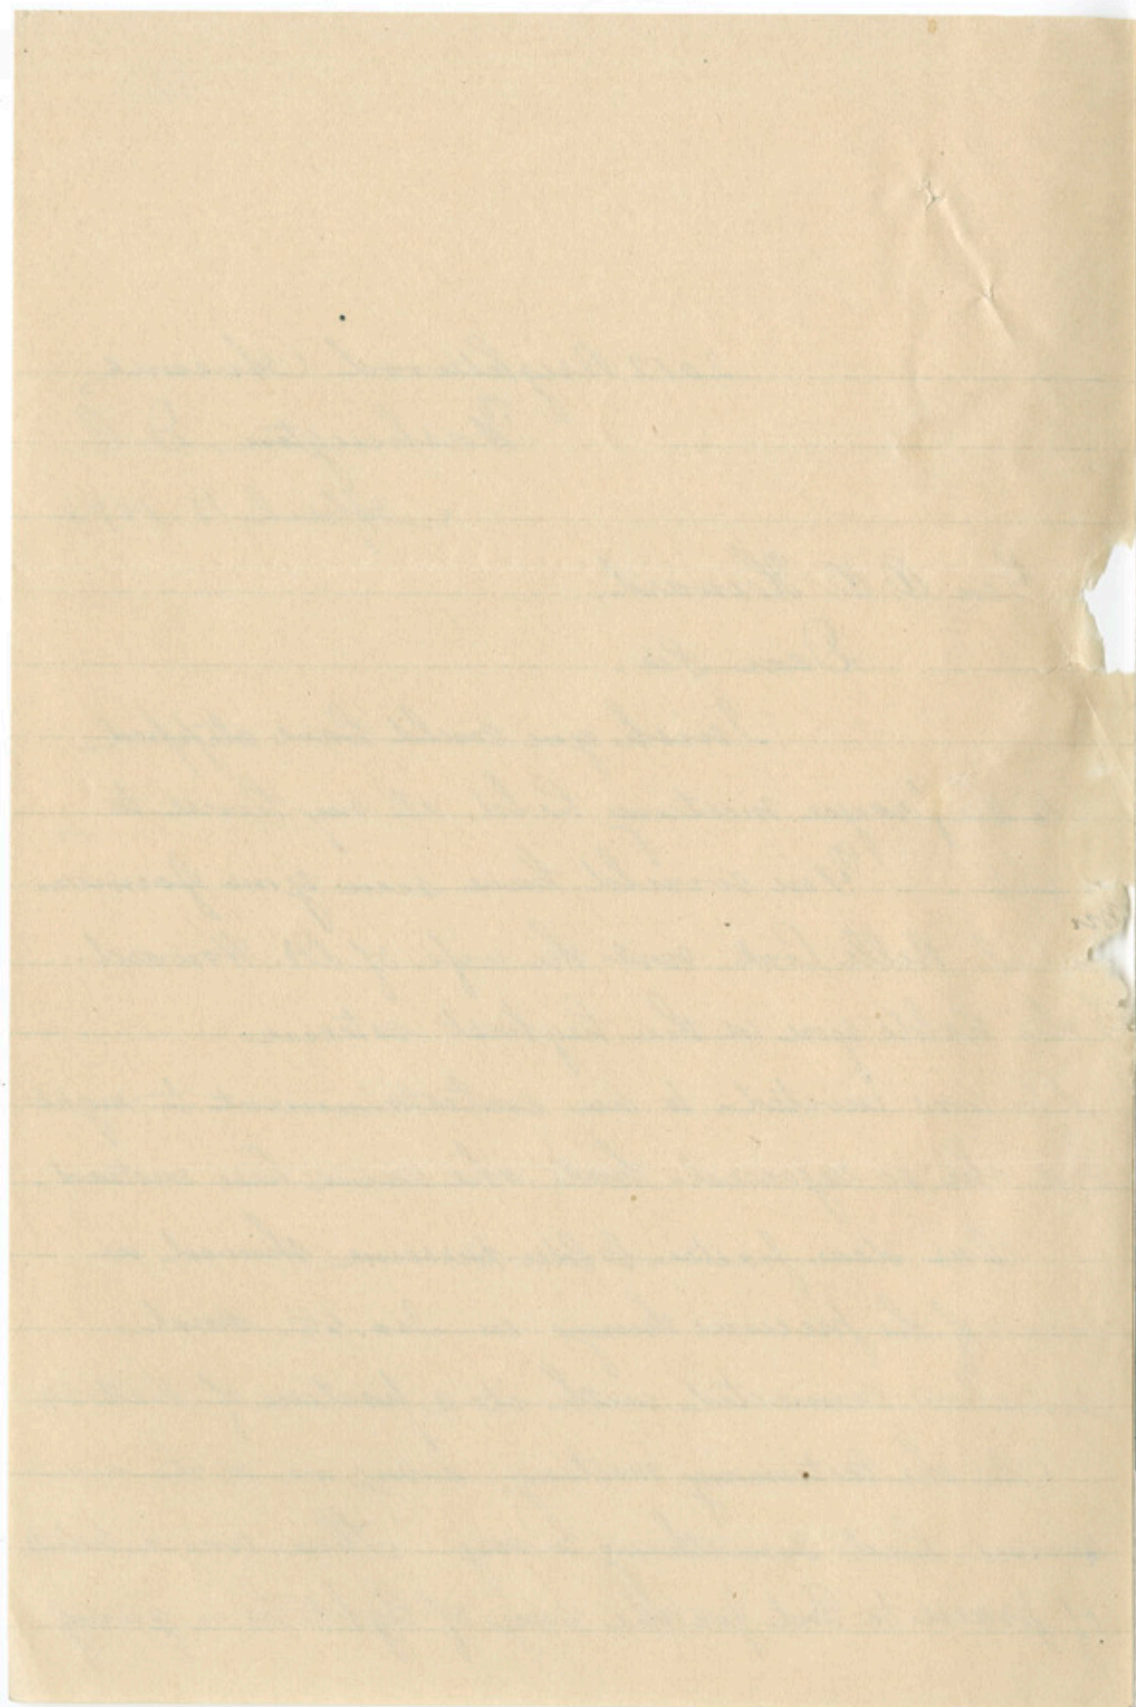

Dear Sir;

I wish you could have stepped to the prayer meeting held at my house to night. You would have seen your former niece Belle Cook now the wife of Dr. Howard.
she holds you in the highest esteem.

She was invited to an entertainment to night
but she so rejoiced that she came here instead.

Our dear pastor Elder Hersum showed us some of the precious things in Isa. 58. and somehow connected with it a portion of Matt. 24.

At the testimony meeting, every one in the double rooms had something to say. There was a tribute of praise to God for the rays of light he is giving

2
es in his precious Word.

How can I keep these wonderful things to myself? Impossible. I love to call attention to those things that have so helped me.

You were called South, and I did not even meet you at the meeting of Conference that convened at Jersey City, last month.

I wish very much that you might meet with Elder C. E. Frank of 25 Oak St. Jersey City N. J. He has much of the Spirit of God with him, and he is a felt power wherever he goes. I think it is because he relies wholly on the Lord. Then he is a ^a close student of the Word, and that means so much in these times when so many ministers are pulling the Word to pieces, and separating it from itself, so that one hardly knows what to believe.

I shall hope and pray that somehow, in some way, you may meet Elder Franke
and listen and read for yourself - great light in these latter days.

Always your friend

Mrs. Elizabeth W. Harris.
