My Dear General,

My friend Col. Cox - offers to call on you for me - He brings copy of "the Mining laws of Colombia" - I have looked through them - find nothing relating to Coal - except on page 5.

Have you the original papers or grant or whatever my uncle received from Pres: Diaz? I think my Aunt has them in a Safe Deposit Vault in Albany but perhaps you have seen them or a translation of them -

Geo. Ticknor Curtis passed on them as being O.K. - but what I would like to know is - what did he get from the State of Panama? On page 5, of the book - "the Republic reserves to itself the ownership in the Coal Mines" &c This appears to ~~have~~ follow what was passed on Feb'y 3/1888 - 20 years after my Uncle had renounced his claim - Could the Republic at that date take away what the State of Panama had granted 20 yrs before?

The 37th. Regt. Ohio Volunteer Infantry, in command of the writer, Major Charles Hipp, formed part of the 2nd. Brig.
2nd. Div. 15th. A.C.

The Division was marching, since early daylight of July 28.
1864, when we left the road, cautiously feeling our way, and deploying on a wooded ridge, where we halted.

It was about 8 O'clock, when Gen. Morgan L. Smith, commanding the Division, ordered me, personally, to march with the regiment, in a direction indicated, about a mile from our right, and occupy a position of observation, with special regard to the right; to hold, until relieved by the Division of Jeff. C. Davis.

The position selected, was a plateau, occupied by a deserted log house, or stable, in a cleared field.

In front (south) was a narrow piece of open woods, then a cleared field of about 80 acres, and beyond this open woods; that is, woods cleared of undergrowth.

To the rear and left was a steep decline, heavily wooded; on the right the surface was more level along the ridge, covered with thick undergrowth and fallen trees.

I prepared the loghouse with loopholes for sharpshooters; and deployed three Companies as skirmishers to the right, through the brush, some 3 or 400 yards; and two Companies in front, at the line of the woods and cleared field.

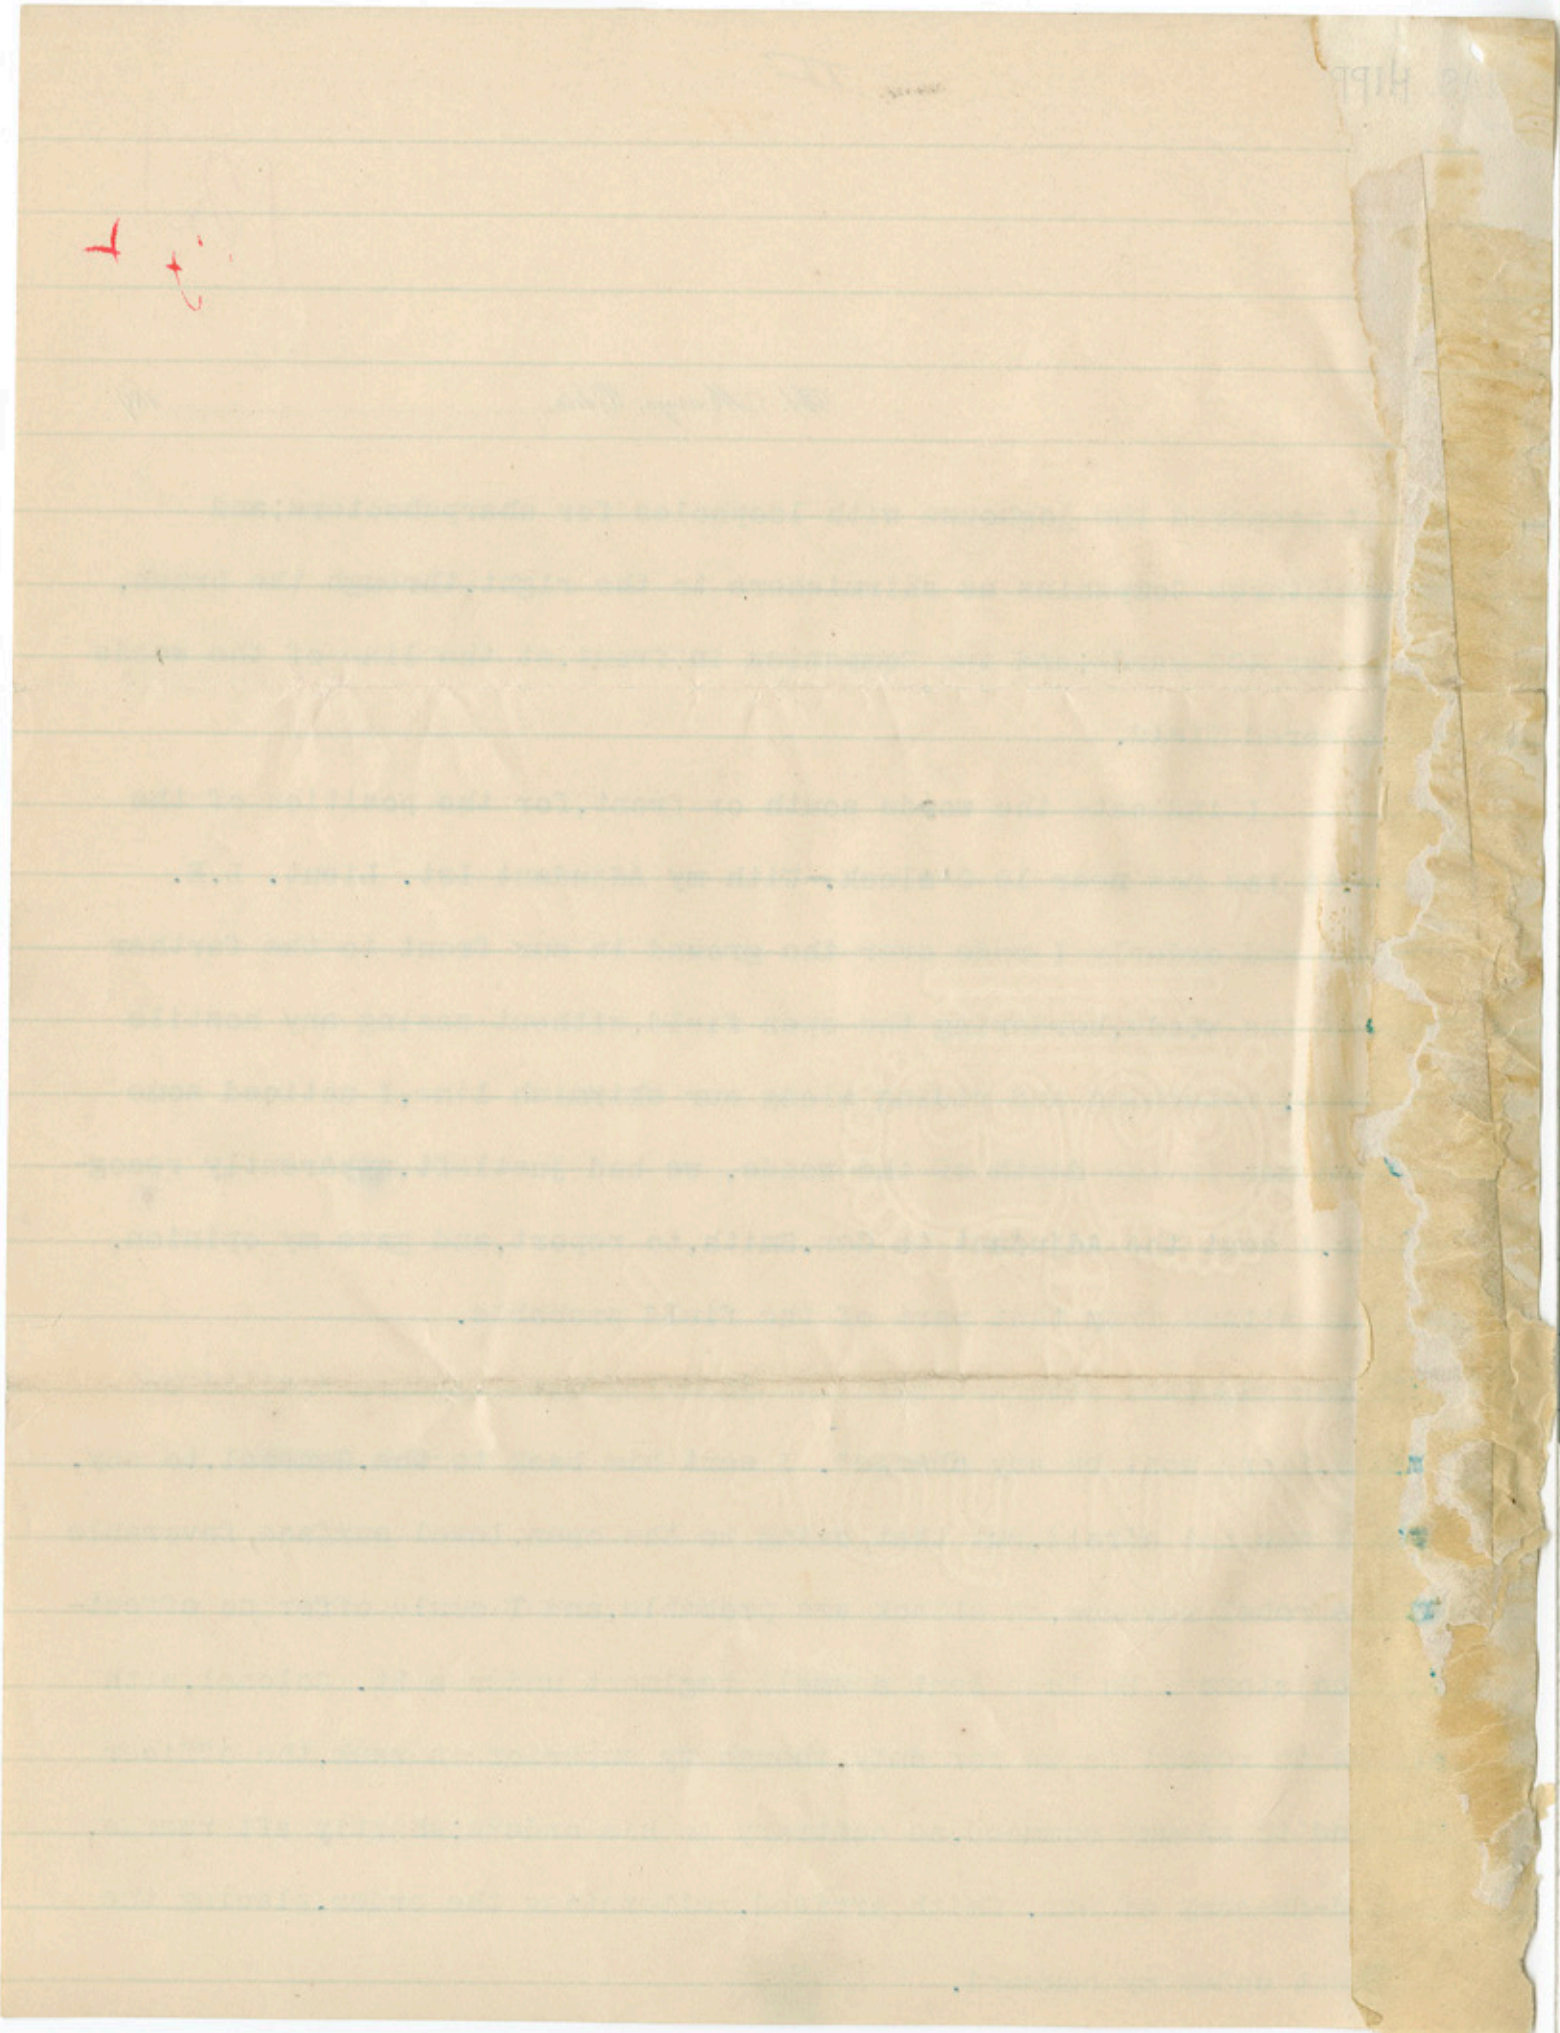

I indicate the woods south or front, for the position of the enemy. It was now near 10 O'clock. With my Adjutant 1st. Lieut. L.E. Lambert and orderly I rode over the ground in our front to the farther edge of the woods, bordering the open field, without seeing any hostile movement; returning and riding along our skirmish line, I noticed some mounted men in the depth of the woods, we had just left, apparently recognizing. I sent the Adjutant to Gen. Smith, to report, and gave my opinion, that an attack from that part of the field probable.

The Adjutant returned with the cheering intelligence "not to be afraid, there wont be any charge". I sent him back to the General, to say, that I was not afraid, but that, owing to the open, level surface, favorable to the rebel advance, an attack was probable, and I could offer no effective resistance. He then sent a small regiment under a Lt. Colonel, with orders to report to me for duty; though my superior in rank, the officer refused to assume command, as contrary to his orders; shortly afterwards, an aid-de-camp of Gen. Smith arrived, reiterating the order, placing the regiment under my command.

I posted it in reserve, some 20 yards in rear of my men, with orders to remain in line. I then rode along the ridge to the left, and observed a regiment deploying towards the front, soon after followed by another, into a narrow valley, extending towards the open woods, where I had previously made observations; this was part of our brigade, under Col. W.S. Jones, 53rd. Ohio Vol. Inf. as I later discovered.

The position of this force, was, as previously stated, in a valley, or rather cul-de-sac, about 50 feet below its surroundings. After a short halt near the foot of the rising hill, I noticed a movement towards the front, with ^{some} cheering of the men, which I afterwards learned, was a charge to clear the hill of any hostile force.

As I could see plainly over the grounds, I knew that no enemy was there, in sight. At near 11 o'clock, I observed, in the woods to our front, more mounted men, showing considerable activity. I sent my orderly to report to Gen. Smith, and the Adjutant to recall our skirmishers on the right. Heavy firing commenced on the left and masses of Infantry appeared in front. Riding along our skirmish line, I received a shot, penetrating my breast, but not disabling me. The enemy rapidly advanced against the quick firing of our skirmishers.

My regiment had been in line for two hours, the other, just in its rear; then the force under Gen. W.S. Jones, which was in an indefensible position at the time, fell rapidly back to their right and rear, partly ~~xxx~~ between us and the advancing enemy. I vainly tried to keep the retreating men from covering my front, until the rebels were within a few yards of us, when the regiment fired one volley, and at the same time I was disabled by a shot in the arm, falling off my horse almost in the rebel lines, and was barely carried off the field by Sergeant Fongler from surrounding rebels, for which act of bravery, he was awarded a medal of honor.

The regiment sent to my assistance, and posted in reserve, had disappeared, when I was about to order it forward on my right, just before the actual conflict. For the part taken by the three companies on the right, as skirmishers I refer to the statement of my Adjutant 1st. Lieut. L.E. Lambert, which is herewith enclosed; I would add, that Gen. M.L. Smith sent his aid-de-camp, next day, to me at the hospital in Marietta, with his compliments and condolence.

I was ordered by Major Hipp to recall the three companies in skirmish line on the right, but before accomplished, the enemy was upon us. I directed the companies to fight the enemy, and slowly rally on the left and rear.

An encounter with the enemy at once ensued, and directly our entire line was engaged in a hot skirmish fire. The enemy fired many volleys, and charged with determination.

Our boys fought bravely, and closed up as well as they could. The fight now began in dead earnest, and we, although weak to resist the overpowering force, were determined to hold our ground. The enemy repeatedly charged our Regiment, and repeatedly we checked them, slowly falling to the rear, and closing on our left, until we reached the edge of a ridge, where we made a firm stand, and here held the enemy in check until reinforcements had arrived.

As stated, Major Hipp was disabled at the beginning of this battle, he receiving several severe wounds, and suffered the loss of his left arm. I seeing the importance of not losing a moments time in this hot conflict, I directed and guided the Regiment, and when we were relieved by reinforcements,

I formally turned over the command to Captain Carl Moritz, the senior Officer of the Regiment present.

During this battle the enemy at different times came up so close, and in overpowering force, that, at moments it appeared we could not resist any longer, but we were determined to hold the ground, and we did.

I witnessed the following incident in my front: Private Frederick Fahrni of Co. F, at the close approach of the enemy, rushed forward, grasped one of the rebels, and wrested his musket away from him, and then firing with the enemy's musket in place of his own,
which had become overheated from constant firing. But a minute later Fahrni received a mortal wound.

The writer hereof was at that time Adjutant of the Regiment.

This may certify that at the battle of Ezra Chapel near Atlanta, Ga. July 28th, 1864, Major Chas. Hipp commanded the 37th Regt. O.V.I., said regiment at the time was part of the 2nd Brigade, 2nd Div. ^{15.} A.C.

At the commencement of said engagement said Major Chas. Hipp with his regiment was ordered to a position in front of the 15th A.C. About the time he reached said position while riding in front of his Regiment he was shot from his horse and rendered unable to leave the field.

Just at this time the rebel army advanced in such force as to drive his Regiment from its position and said Major Hipp would have been left between the lines of the two contending armies, and no doubt would have been killed during the remainder of the battle, but for the courage of Sargent Ernst Torgler who, as I was informed rushed to his rescue and carried him off the field.

Gen. O. O. Howard,
Governor's Island,
New York.

Dear Sir:--

If possible we wish to have an address by a prominent army officer, and at the suggestion of our Captain, Lieut. J. C. Beardsley an ex-army officer, take the liberty of addressing you on the subject and asking your terms. Should you care to consider the matter would say that we prefer the address on your personal experience in some engagement. Will say that the Company is composed of young gymnasium men of the Young Men's Christian Association, and should you favor us with an address, assure you it would be highly appreciated.

Trusting for a favorable reply, believe me,

Yours very sincerely,

You may recall
the proposition to visit the Boys High School (Brooklyn) at which we had a brief connection. At the occasion of your last visit to the Girls High School.

If you will, at your own convenience - an arrange to visit the school (Macy and Putnam Ave., Brooklyn) some Friday morning 9 to 9:30. It will afford me all great pleasure to find you the right of way - We have about 800 young fellows on the way to Manhood
& I am sure it will be a pleasant sight to look into their faces as I am equally sure they will fully appreciate the opportunity. They afforded them to see & hear to you.
