My Dear General,

I have just recd a letter from my Washington

the time and place that will best suit your

my photographer can meet you at your headquarters

Dear General,-

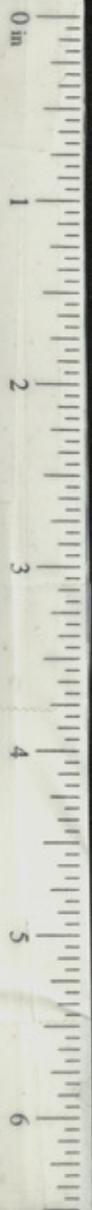

Your letter at hand.--A company numbering about 32 of the Association of Cadets want to be your personal escort. They are said to be a good organization. I told the Commander I would write to you about it. There is also a young man who would act as your Chief of Staff or Adjutant General. His name is A. E. Beekman and he is one of Senator Hanna's clerks. He might help to do good work in getting together a staff. Of course, if you have any friends up there that you wish to go on your staff, select them. Please let me hear from you.

I found Mr Myers in much better health than I had expected to find him, though his physician, he says, wishes him to give up all work for at least two months.

He has signed formal requests for his resignation from both the S.M.V. and the Child's Institute. I will hand them to you when I see you Monday. (You remember I stop at Troy tomorrow.) This relieves the S.M.V. from any responsibility for an investigation.

My dear General.

I have been thinking for some time to write you a word of appreciation and encouragement in your undertaking to establish an Industrial University in memory of Mr Lincoln at Cumberland Gap. It is generally estimated that a man's best work is done on the sunny side of sixty; but if you succeed in this enterprise (as I believe you will) then the shady side of sixty will be to you the harvest the harvest time for golden honors. Your life has been a busy one and you have given your best service to your country, but public honors have not blinded you to the intellectual and moral needs of your less fortunate Countrymen; nor have you been tempted for one moment to ask the selfish question "Am I my brother's keeper?" I cannot imagine a more desirable end to a long and successful life of an old Soldier than to see him still in the saddle, booted & spurred, with sword in hand, battling against ignorance, intemperance and and irreligion - enemies more dangerous to our liberty and to the peace of society than any armed foe. It is gratifying also to remember that you have undertaken this enterprise with the instincts of a true commander. You have not sent out "Aid" or "Picket" to report, but you have reconnoitered the field in person, and I cannot see where you would have selected a better position for <sup>the</sup> University. I believe that Mrs Lincoln herself would take you by the hand and tell you that you could do him no greater honor than to erect a University in his name which would educate the descendants of the old Mountain Soldiers who left their own State and stood by him for the Union during the Civil war. Your friends here and the friends of education in this Section look forward with intense interest to the banquet on the 11th inst. to hear of the University being firmly established by a liberal endowment. Dr Larry is doing a magnificent work at the Hall. We have had some trouble in the Hearson department, arising more out of the old Weaver trouble than any thing else. Hee seems to have a few friends here who seem to be more interested in his grievance than they are in the interest of the school - but the success of the L. M. U. does not depend upon these little side issues. With prayers for your success, and with much esteem I am yours truly R. H. Patterson.
