Dear Harry:

Sent me Grace's address on 55th St. by return mail.
Have sent back "Pass" to Chauncy. Do not trouble yourself about the
"Gen. Burr side Professorship" I have two behind me who will pay the money & take my subscription off my hands.
Will explain when I get home.
I am anxious to get the
"Gen. B. Professorship" right away.
I enclose you a check for $375.
Mrs Weston sent me $500. I have used $125. (ask me for details when

I get home). As I haven't Mrs Weston's initials of rail receipt thro fairchild, who has her full name. I think it is Annie M. Weston.

I enclose Gamie's card ..
Sorry for Adelheid; but think Gamie is too apprehensive.

Much love to Mamma

Dear General Howard,

The Cosmopolitan has not yet written me as to whether or not they will take my " SHORT STORY OF GETTYSBURG Forty years after the battle," but I am collecting illustrations for the article, and thought, possibly, that we would insert likenesses of Meade and Lee and of the three living Corps Commanders, you, Sickles and Longstreet.

If you have a good photograph of yourself in major-general's uniform, wont you lend it to me for a couple of months? I have a picture of you in a brigadier's uniform, which, of course, is not what we should have.

With best wishes,

Yours very truly,

H. S. Buickoper.

Dear General Howard:-

I am sending to you by express, all of the manuscript of the Indian book. It has been very carefully and thoroughly revised and is now in good shape for the printer. I hope you will not find it necessary to make many changes, and in that case I shall be spared the labor and expense of typewriting the manuscript over again, a task I should like to avoid if possible.

I inclose memoranda from my reviewer, which please note. Kindly return this memoranda to me. When you are through with the manuscript please return it to me with any comments or suggestions you may wish to make.

Yours very truly,

A. D. Worthington

Dear General Howard:-

Yours of 11th received. There is one matter to which I wish to call your attention, and that is your story of Marcus Whitman. My reviewer says that it is a thrilling story but its correctness is very much doubted. There has been a good deal of controversy regarding its truth. It is said that Mr. Whitman made the journey in the interest of the missionary cause, principally, having been ordered by the Missionary Board to give up the station at a time when its best opportunities were at hand. For this purpose he started for Boston, but going first to Washington to urge his plan for protecting and aiding emigration. It is said that he never claimed to have "saved Oregon," and that the idea that he did never obtained until after the Whitman massacre. The story has since been widely circulated. But documents, facts, and dates to prove it unhistorical have been collected in "Essays in Historical Criticism," by Edward G. Bourne. Would it not be wise to leave out the political part, and speak of his heroism as being exerted in the cause of missionary work and emigration? It is too bad to spoil the story as it stands in your version, which is widely accepted, but if it is "unhistorical," what then?

Very truly yours,

A. D. Worthington

P. S. I inclose a second note about this matter from my reviewer which please return.

Dear General Howland:-

Yours of 11th received. There is one matter to which I wish to call your attention, and that is your story of Harlan's criticism. My reviewer says that it is a thrilling story, but the reviewer is very much doubtful. There has been a good deal of controversy regarding its truth. It is said that Mr. Witham made the journey in the interest of the missionary cause, principally, having been ordered by the Missionary Board to give up the station at a time when the local organizations were at hand. For this purpose he started for Boston, and going first to Washington to urge his plan for protecting an existing station. It is said that he never obtained until after the "mission" was over. The story has since been widely circulated. But Harlan, and others to whom it is historical have been collected in "Harlan's Historical Criticism," by Edward G. Howland. That it not be taken to leave out the political part, and speak of his heroism as being founded in the cause of missionary work and civilization. It is too bad to spoil the story as it stands in your version, which is widely accepted, and if it is "unhistorical," what then?

Very truly yours,

P. S. I inclose a second note about this matter from my reviewer. Which please return.

My dear General:

I have been looking up the data for my sketch of Swayne's services in the army, and hope you will not forget to send me as soon as possible what you know of him while he was under your command. I have taken out of your reports what you say of him, but after I left the army on the 19th of August I know you came in contact with him. I am also anxious for information concerning his administration of the Freedmen's Bureau in Alabama. I know nothing about this and can find no record of it anywhere. You can undoubtedly help me greatly in that, and if you know also of his appointment as Colonel in the regular army, and his retirement, and anything else that I can work into my article that will be beneficial to Swayne, please send it to me. I want to make it complete and do him justice.

Very truly yours,

G. M. Dwyer
