Address
before The Press Club
Boston.
Dec 10, 1898

[Signature]
[Stamp: Bond States, No. 15]

[Note: Bond]
THE VOICE OF MASSACHUSETTS.

Two of the most thoroughly representative Representatives on the floor of the Massachusetts House of Representatives had met and made the house hand-made as if it had never been held in the house before both clubs conspicuous parts. The men referred at greater or less length to the equal opportunity of the two clubs to do the work of the house, which is to make it a forum of all the four voices of the house in Washington.

It is a most striking and significant fact that without preservation of the services of each club perfectly harmonized. The Boston Douglas Club and the Republican Club, the latter better known as the Bosox, had conducted the work of the nation in an even manner, and President McKnelly had administered the affairs of the nation ever since the recent defeat of the party which has won the respect and admiration of every section of the Union and abroad.

"Carry perfectly?" President Meyer went on to explain, and was sure, if the question was not put to him, that the President would be sure to do it, of course. President Meyer further said, as a candidate for a new opportunity, which the new legislation will give him, that his friends would be out to see him and that the result would be as successful as the other. He hoped that the House would do its duty and pass the bill.

The Hon. George A. Smith, President of the Massachusetts Bar, said that he was proud to have followed President Meyer in the matter of the bill. He was pleased to know that the House would pass the bill, and he wished to express his opinion of the President. He thought the President was a good man and one who would do a good job for the country.

The Hon. Joseph M. Knowlton, Attorney General of the Commonwealth, said that he was glad to follow the President in the matter of the bill. He was pleased to know that the House would pass the bill, and he wished to express his opinion of the President. He thought the President was a good man and one who would do a good job for the country.

The Hon. John C. Haskell, speaking both as a soldier and as a philanthropist, from his experience abroad, said that the President had the interest of the country at heart. He thought the President was a good man and one who would do a good job for the country.

The Hon. Joseph M. Knowlton, Attorney General of the Commonwealth, said that he was pleased to know that the House would pass the bill, and he wished to express his opinion of the President. He thought the President was a good man and one who would do a good job for the country.
With Treaty.

No Trouble Over the Appropriation.

Insurgents Battling With Spaniards.

(From a Correspondent.)

Washington, D.C., Jan. 9—It is believed by the Administration that the signature of President Roosevelt and the ratification of the treaty are in the air. The Senators have been called into conference to discuss the question of the treaty and its ratification. The Senators are expected to vote for the treaty, and the President is said to be confident of its passage. The treaty is a matter of great importance to the nation, and its passage is expected to be followed by a period of peace and prosperity.

Coolidge.
HAD HELP OF DIVINE SPIRIT.

Major General Howard Thus Speaks of President McKinley's Wisdom During the War—Address on the Conditions in Cuba—Hon. John W. Candler's Remarks on Trade Relations.

Mail, Gen. Oliver O. Howard, U. S. A., arrived, who has lately returned from Santiago de Cuba, was the guest of the officers and directors of the Boston Chamber of Commerce yesterday, and made an interesting address on the conditions existing in Cuba. Hon. John W. Candler, who recently represented the state of Georgia in Congress, was present. The address of Gen. Howard was as follows:

Gen. Howard.

General of the Army, Members of the Chamber of Commerce,

Whereas the meetings in beginning various cities have been so much in the press, and in general commercial interests and once observations as to the condition of our army in Cuba have been made, it may not be disagreeable to address you upon the scene of war where we have been located for the last three months, and to give you an outline of the facts as well as the spirit of the army on the field.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

In the conduct of the war, the United States has been able to conduct its business with great efficiency. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

In conclusion, I would say that the war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

Hon. John W. Candler.

Mr. John W. Candler, who recently represented the state of Georgia in Congress, was present. He made an interesting speech on trade relations, and said:

Mr. Candler.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

In conclusion, I would say that the war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

Mr. Candler.

Mr. Candler.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

In conclusion, I would say that the war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

Mr. Candler.

Mr. Candler.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

In conclusion, I would say that the war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

Mr. Candler.

Mr. Candler.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

In conclusion, I would say that the war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

Mr. Candler.

Mr. Candler.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

In conclusion, I would say that the war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

Mr. Candler.

Mr. Candler.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

In conclusion, I would say that the war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

Mr. Candler.

Mr. Candler.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

In conclusion, I would say that the war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

Mr. Candler.

Mr. Candler.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

In conclusion, I would say that the war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

Mr. Candler.

Mr. Candler.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

The war, both in its origin and in its conduct, has been just as great a trial to our army as our statesmen of this country. The war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

In conclusion, I would say that the war has been conducted with great efficiency by our army, and it is believed that the war has been conducted with great efficiency.

Mr. Candler.

Mr. Candler.
SADIE M. HUDSON has given the New Testament to a young lady.

BOSTON SUNDAY JOURNAL—DECEMBER 11, 1904.

SYMPHONY NIGHT.
Mr. W. B. Forster, Violinist, will appear at the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, on Monday evening, December 19, at 8 o'clock, in a programme which will also include other well-known artists.

MUSTERED OUT.
Volunteer Signal Corps Men Are Private Citizens.
Ceremony Performed Saturday at East Armory, IL.

THE PHYSICIAN'S EXAMINATION.
A young man was examined by a physician on Wednesday afternoon. His name is William Jones, and he is twenty years old. The examination revealed no serious medical conditions.

NO JUDGE TAKEN.
A judge was taken to the hospital on Monday afternoon. He was found to be suffering from a severe cold.

NEW YORK DISASTER.
The New York Stock Exchange was closed on Tuesday due to heavy losses.

FREE TREATMENT.
The Free Treatment Society has extended its services to include patients with incurable diseases.

THE NEW HOME.
The new home of the Union League Club was dedicated on Monday. The building is located at 23 Park Avenue.

SUNDAY SILENCE.
The town of Boston observed Sunday Silence on Sunday morning.

TO LOCATE THE WRECK.
Well-equipped Expedition Reaches the Site of the Horizon Wreck.

SADIE M. HUDSON has given the New Testament to a young lady.

RED CROSS.
The Red Cross has established a new branch in Boston.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.
The Sunday School at the First Congregational Church was held on Sunday morning.

NEW YORK DISASTER.
The New York Stock Exchange was closed on Tuesday due to heavy losses.